Reflections on a Winter in Black Studies A Message from the Directors

In the midst of this quarter, we can take together: to herald breakthroughs in Black Italian cinema; to engage the referents to the Black Power movement in Kanakan Maoli \(Native Hawaiian\) land struggles of the 1970s, and in a 1973 film production of Black Mama, White Mama, featuring luminaries like Pam Grier; to meditate on calls for racial and gender diversity in the American Sign Language (ASL) interpreter community; and to contemplate the Black hair salon as a "contact zone", where power dynamics are constantly being renegotiated. We are grateful to all the presenters, participants, and supporters who made such a rich quarter of intellectual exchange possible. The Spring promises a similarly vibrant experience in the life of the mind with the launch of BSP's first iteration of the Sherley Anne Williams Writing Residency in mid-April to the return of the Blackness in Latin America Series featuring scholar Dixa Ramirez D'Oleo in May. We look forward to the various forums in the quarter ahead to be in community and scholarship with you. Check out the events and opportunities below!

BSP provides a platform for supporting meaningful work in Black Studies among faculty, graduate and undergraduate students from across the UCSD campus, while building sustainable and mutually beneficial relationships with broader San Diego and UC communities.

Community Spotlight

"OXUMARÉ"

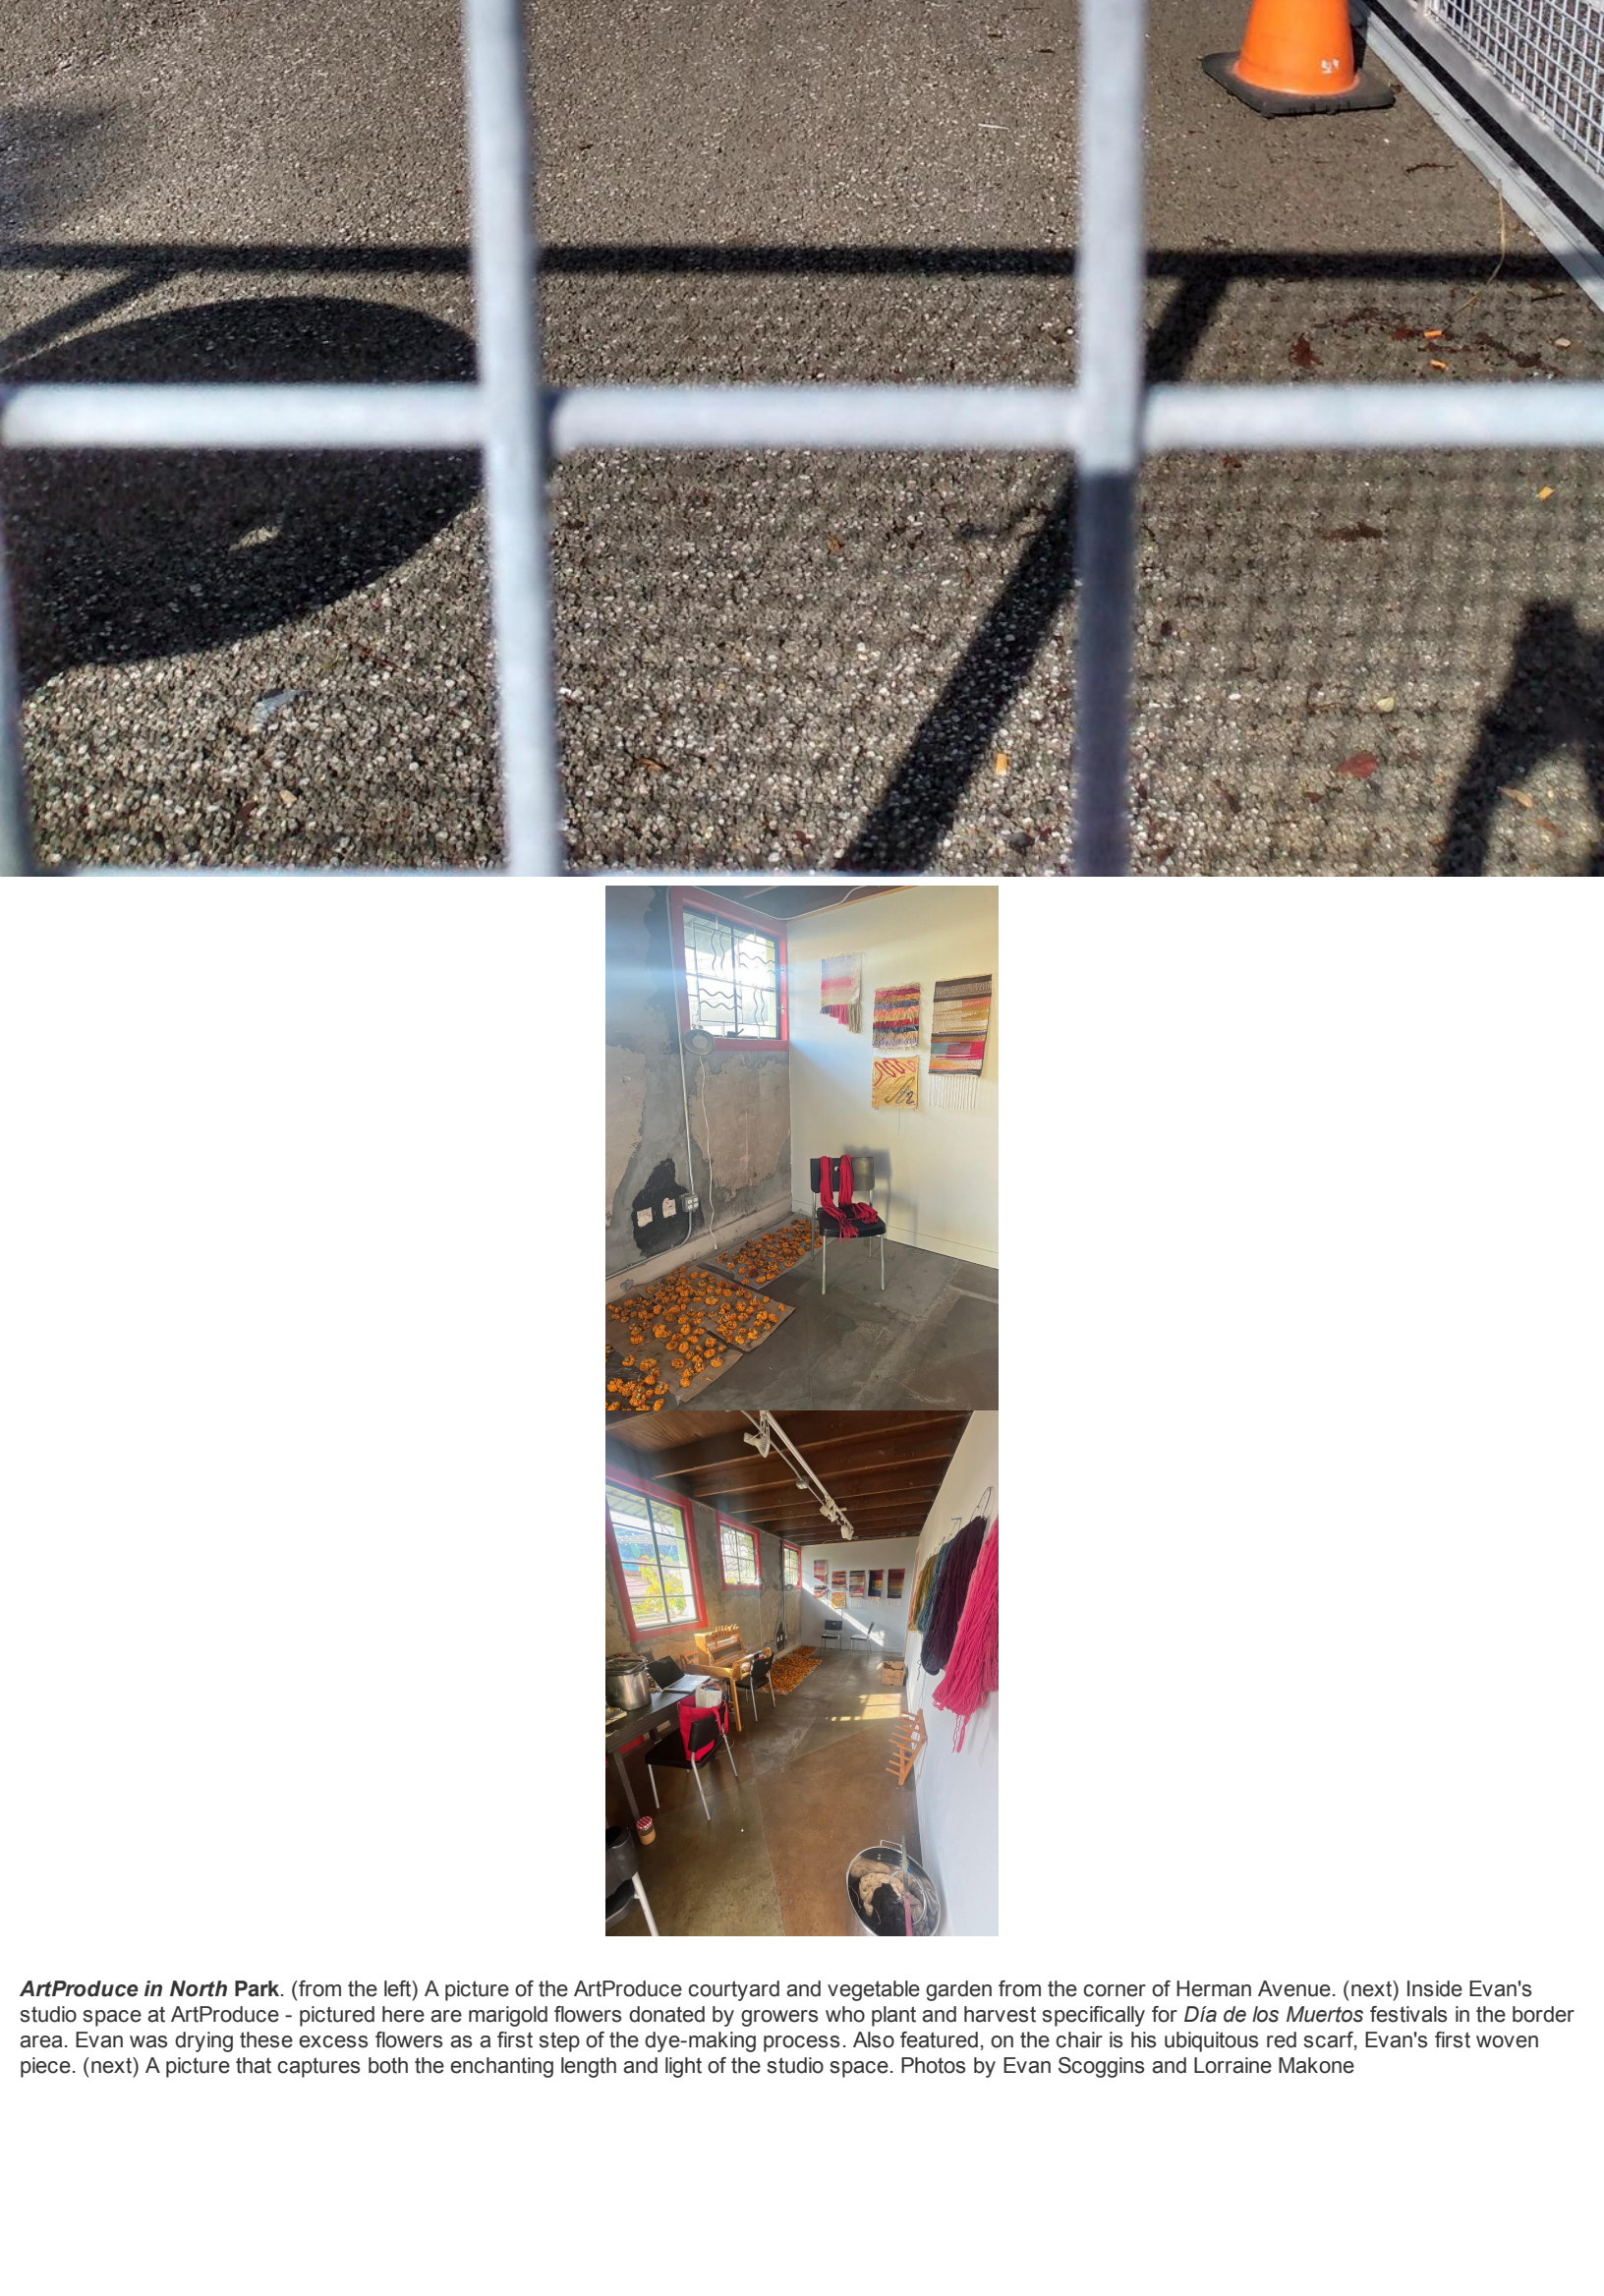

Spotlight: A brief view into the practice of BSP Artist in Residence Evan Scoggins
Scenes from a BSP visit to his ArtProduce studio in the Fall...

The featured textile above is titled Oxumaré. The piece is a meditation on the perceptions and realities contained in racialized moments of encounter between police authorities and Black people. Among the phenomena associated with the Yoruba deity Oxumaré is the rainbow. Evan's background as a painter and a scholar of color is visible in this woven piece. Photo by Evan Scoggins
